[8] Finally, plaintiffs assert that the court erred in refusing to permit them to amend their complaint to allege that defendant's agency for the sale of the trailer was the real defendant. To support this position, it is contended by plaintiffs that this court has jurisdiction of the action as a separate controversy, and that a misnomer must be regarded as insufficient to bar the action. This contention is not sound. In the first place, it appears from the complaint as originally filed that the defendants are all residents of San Joaquin County. The accident occurred in Stanislaus County. No appearance was made by any of the defendants. The action was at all times properly tried and determined on the merits by the trial court sitting without a jury, and no part of the judgment is assignable to this court as error. (Coe v. McDonald, 103 Cal. 375, 378 [37 P. 196]; Vincent v. Superior Court, 194 Cal. 85, 87 [227 P. 461].) For the foregoing reasons the judgment from which plaintiffs have appealed should be, and is, affirmed. Q: wordpress ldap authentication plugin My company has been working on integrating WordPress with our LDAP server. Our LDAP server is AD. We used to use the built in WordPress authentication, but for some reason, after adding LDAP to the database, the built in WordPress authentication isn't working. I've looked all over the place and followed a couple guides, but I'm not sure what the issue is or how to fix it. Is there anyone who can help me out?

A: You might need to add the hostname and the 3e33713323
