Judd Family The Judd Family is a retired California trucking, holding company and family that was founded in San Francisco, California, United States, in the early 20th century by Archibald J. "Archie" Judd. Judd family members at various times were holders of majority or controlling interests in numerous trucking companies in California and Oregon, including, at their zenith, Interstate Commerce and CPC Transportation. Originally Archibald J. Judd was president of the C.J.T. Trucking Company in San Francisco, a company that merged in 1935 with several other trucking companies in California to form Intertrans National. In the 1950s a portion of the Intertrans interests was sold to International Harvester Company, and the arch-rival CPC Transportation acquired a minority interest. The two companies battled for control of the western trucking market. In the 1970s Interstate Commerce regained majority ownership of the CPC holdings, including a majority interest in International Harvester
